Western Kentucky State Teachers College

During World War II, while Victor was again serving his country, Western was the site of much aviation-related activity. Three months after Pearl Harbor, students in the Training School's Industrial Arts department joined a program to construct wooden models of 50 different types of planes, both American and foreign. Made from specifications provided by the Navy, the models were sent to aviation bases and training centers around the country for use in training aircraft spotters.

In spring 1943, Western became home to four hundred Army Air Corps cadets seeking their pilot's wings as members of the 321st College Training Detachment. Housed in Potter and Schneider Halls, the recruits took flight instruction in Piper Cubs and Aeroncas at the Bowling Green airport.
