EMBLEM

The Minute Man riding a horse and carrying lightning bolts symbolizes the squadron's efforts to provide advance electronic communications which is vital to freedom. Just as Paul Revere rode through the area now known as Hanscom Air Force Base on his way to Concord to provide an early warning that the British were coming, the 2014th Communications Squadron of Air Force Communications Command performs the same significant job, freedom through communications, by providing advance electronic communications as depicted by the lightning bolts.
