OPERATIONS

The 45th Air Base Group stationed in Queensland was not assigned to a specific area, since it was the reception unit for all aircraft which were ferried from the US to Australia and was responsible for the inspection and maintenance prior to delivery of the aircraft to tactical units. These assignments left only Adelaide and Perth areas without an air base group but air operations were limited in those areas. Five small servicing details were assigned to the Adelaide area and two were assigned to the Perth area. In the absence of an air base group, any tactical organization which might be assigned to their areas were to requisition their supplies from the depot at Footscray. Tactical organization in other areas were to requisition their supplies from the air base group servicing the respective area.
